

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

A strong, moist westerly to southwesterly flow will last through most of Sunday before a cold front moves east overnight, leading to a clearance of the heavy rain during the early hours of Monday. A further 20-30 mm of rain is likely in western areas with 40-50 mm in prone high ground areas exposed to the south-west. This rainfall, falling onto already saturated ground, is likely to lead to further flooding.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:15 on Sun, 15th Nov 2015 until 04:00 on Mon, 16th Nov 2015

Further rain, heavy at times, is likely during Sunday afternoon and evening, clearing from the west during the early hours of Monday. Largest rainfall totals will be over south-west facing hills.

Be aware that, given already saturated conditions, flooding is possible either from standing water or from rivers which have remained high after the large rainfall totals over the last few days.

This is an update to the warning to reduce the area over England, but to extend the warning into the early hours of Monday, and should be viewed alongside the Amber Warnings.
